When John Trumbull fell in love with vivacious and sprightly Gertrade Moore, no non-would ever have suspected that he was a scholar, a thinker and a settled man of 40. His general actions were those of a youth of 18 undersoing his first case of love. The upshot of it was that when these two became engaged Miss Moore pulled Mr. Trumbull around by his philosophical nose and made him dance to her fiddling as suited her capicious and changing moods. Matrimony found the same condition of affairs. Every domestic question was decladed by Mrs. Trumbull, no matrie whether it was the modern of the control of

A petition has been drawn up by the miners there and forwarded to President McKinley, appealing for the correction of what is termed a "costly and unwarranted mistake."

Certain Philadelphians, so far from joining in the cry against Great Britain, which is so marked a feature of American politics, have formed a society composed of many men powerful in the financial and political world, who pledge themselves to work for an open alliance with that country.

The first meeting of this organization, which is known as the the Transatlantic Society of America, was held about one week ago. The proceedings were kept secret, but the plans have now become known through an application in court for a charter. In a circular which is to be sent out, it is stated that the purpose of the society which will be published refutations af the erroneous impressions which may obtain in regard to the relations between the two countries, by lectures and addresses on commercial questions and on subjects which will far there the plans of the society.

One of the things shipped from one of the down river towns on the boat the Clevelander rode on was a goat of the sort that delights the average small boy. The Clevelander was wandering terences between the Potonnac river boat and the Lake Erle craft with which he was familiar, when he noticed the colored deckhand standing almost motionless before the goat, which was tied to one of the supports of the upper deck. He was seratching his bead and apparently very much puzzled.

The Advantages of a Finnegan Tubular Axle Over a Solid Steel Axle.

In comparison to the Solid Steel Axle, the Tubular gives a much greater circumference and larger bearing, which, on average roads, is well understood to make the draught of the wagon very much lighter.

The Iron or Steel Axle, from the very slight taper, when set to bring the wheel to a plumb spoke, is not level on the bottom side, but inclinately the point, causing great friction and consequently heavy draft. The best Solid Axles sooned on the point of the point causing great friction and consequently heavy draft. The best Solid Axles sooned on the Tubular Axle is made of, can never crystallize.

The Tubular Axle Spindles are finished as round and true as the finest Coach Axles, while all Skeins must, from process of their manufacture, vary in size and be imperfect in shape, causing more or less friction and heaviness at.

The Advantages of a Finnegan Tubular Axle Over a Wooden Axle.

Tabular Axles, of course, can neither decay nor warp as Wooden Axles frequently do, destroying their "set" and again adding to their draft.

The Tubular Axle being made of steel, hammered while very hot, under a spray of cold water, gives a bearing so smooth and so hard that years of use show no appreciable wear.

They are provided with cast boxes of the best quality of gray Iron, which gives them the advantage of the well-known principle, that two metals of different texture, wearing upon each other, do so with much less friction than when of same material.

Strength of Tubular Axles.

To break a tube, power cnough must be applied to crush or "buckle" it on one side, before it can open on the opposite side; therefore, unless there is a flaw in the metal (which is nearly impossible, as we test every piece). The Tubular Axle is many times stronger than any other can of Axle, or any part of the wagon.

Purchasers are not Buying an Experiment.

We began the manufacture of Hollow Axles in 1898, and for twenty years used fron pipe. Since its invention in 1888, we have used Steel Tubing exclusively in all styles of Axles.

It is a well known fact that most patent medicine "ads" are fakes, but since introducing DR. HALL'S RHEUMATIC CURE the CURE the proprietors have adhered strictly to the rule of publishing none but genuine testimonials, MR. CHAS. SUDDS. "You are at perfect liberty to use my name it it will be of any benefit to rheumatic sufferers," writes Mr. Charles Sudds (farmer), Simcee Island, Mr. Sudds says that he suffered untold agony with rheumatism for eight years. The disease affected him in the back, hip, and down the sciatte nerve. The pain and loss of sleep he experienced made life not worth the living He might as well have taken so much water as the various other rheumatic remedies he tried. An Ocean Hotel,

Some idea of what a big hotel a transatiantic liner is may be gained from the following from Ainsile's Magnasine: "Everything about the kitchen of a great steamship is on a most elaborate scale. The range weighs many tons; the various soup caldrons are constructed to hold 20 gallous; loaves are basked by the hundred, joints roasted by the dozen, each in a separate and specially constructed compartment. To serve the meals thousands of plates, pieces of silver, coups and saucers and mapkins are required, and the average breakage in the galley of a big ship amounts to a barred of china every day. The amount of stores required for a single voyage by a great liner is comparable only to the commissariat of an army. He Explained.

At a school one day a teacher, having asked most of his pupils the difference between an island and a peninsula without receiving a satisfactory answer, came to the last boy.

"I can explain it, sis," said the bright youth. "First get two glasses. Fill one with water and the other with milk. Then catch a fly and place it in the glass of water. That fly is an island, because it is entirely surrounded by water. But now place the fly in the glass of milk, and it will be a peninsula, because it is entirely surrounded by water.

he ain't got no more sense than to fall in on, me., Myoa, Ball!"

The sound came closer.

"Great Jerusajem, the old blind fool

Blufs in the Directory.

If you pick up that interesting annual, the city directory, you will find it filled with blufs. Here is a man down as a superintendent. You know he is only the foreman of alubor gang. Another is designated as a general manager. Three or four men are subject to list "general" management, or, as his "year-old-son, who inherited his preparative of the part of some political cultor of a new spaper of some political cultor of a new spaper of some political diportance. Withdrawing a Juroz.
One particularly amusing incident characterized Congressman Burton's early experience at the bar. For some reason it became necessary to request a continuance in a case in which he was counsel. After Mr. Burton had explained why there should be a continuance the court told bull in simply to withdraw a juror and the case would be marked continued. For the moment the young attorney was monplued, but after glanding at the court to satisfy the same of the

The Pitching of an Ocean Liner.

E. W. Howe, telling in the Atchison Globe of his experience during a voyage across the Atlantic ocean, gays:

"I believe! I made a discovery in seasistoness. One night when the ship was pitching badly I remarked that when there was a particularly hard lunge the screws came out of the water and whirled round so rapidly as to almost throw me out of bed. I was sleeping with my head forward, and after awhile I discovered that the screws seemed to come out of the water when the prow was in the air. Then it occurred to me that this was impossible. Of course the screws came out when the stern was in the air. Then it occurred to me that this was impossible. Of course the screws came out when the stern was in the air. Then it occurred to me that this was impossible. Of course the screws came out when the stern was in the air. A Child's Philosophy.

It is one of the prime secrets of happiness to recognize and accept one's natural limitations, but philosophy of this kind is perhaps bardly to be expected of children.

A little girl had sent back her plate for turkey two or three times and had been helped bountifully to all the good things that go to make a grand Christmas dinner. Finally she was observed looking rather disconsolately at her um finished plate of torkey.

"What's the matter, Ethel?" asked Uncle John. "You look mouraful."

"Tan's upst the matter, Ethel?" asked Uncle John. "You look mouraful."

"An on mor'n full."

And then abe wondered why everybody laughed.

As It Seemed to Her.

A little girl who was in the habit of tearing her dolls to pleces to see what was institute somewhat surprised her Sunday school reacher.

"What was Adam made of?" asked

"What was Adab made of the teacher.
"The dust of the earth," glibly answered the child.
"What was Eve made of?"
After a moment's bestiation, "The sawdust of the earth."

"Is that possible? But I thought you'd like the root dilags to eat they have down there. You like good things to eat! Why, cap'n, I didn't have a briled beaver tail the whole time I was there?"—Youth's Companion.

Practical Application.
A certain minister during his discourse one Sabbath morning said, "In each blade of grass there is a sermon." The following day one of his flock discovered the good man pushing a lawnmower about his yard and paused to say, "Well, parson, I'm glad to see you engaged in cotting your sermons short!"

"Before I agree to undertake your defense," said the eminent criminal lawyer who had been called in, "you will have to be perfectly frank with me and tell me the whole truth. Did you embezzle the £20,000 you rre accused of having taken?"

"Yes, sir," replied the accused man. "Till not attempt to conceal the fact from you. I stole every penny of it."

"How much of it have you let?"

"Young man," said over, "you'd better plead guty and throw yourself on the mercy of the court."

The Advantages of a Finnegan Tubular Axle Over a Skein.

In comparison to the Thimble Skein, to which we must concede the same advantage large circumfrance over the Solid Axle, as above stated, for the Tubular, we would call attention to the fact that the particular taper of the solid Axle, as above stated, for the Tubular, we would call attention to the fact that the particular taper of the solid state of the bearings, and having never to exceed one-fourth fact wheel to a plump spoke, it is level on the bottom side of the bearings, and having never to exceed one-fourth face on soft, muddy or smooth roads, with the least possible resistance, while the Thimble Skeed on a straight and great taper when set as above, has a bearing which is not level in the wheel, but is inclined up at the point, except friction as above atted. Thus both Solid Axles and Thimble Skeins loss the vast-advantage of the Tubular, which has a level bearing in the wheel.

The Tubular Axle Spindles are finished as round and true as the finest Coach Axles, while all Skeins must, from the process of their manufacture, vary in size and be imperfect in shape, causing more or less friction and heaviness of draft.

A Unique Trip.

Next Thursday an exension will be run over the Bay of Quinte Railway to Kingston and thence by steamer Unique to the Thousand Islands. This steamer is perhaps the fastest boat now running on the river and passengers will have a long stay in either Kingston, Clayton, Thousand Island Park or Alexandria Bay, as they desire. This ought to be enough to satisfy any person in search of a good way to spend an out door day. If any person wishes to stop over in Kingston the tickets will be honored the day following.

not always been chosen by popular vote.

Refore 1800 it was the general custom for the state legislatures to choose the electors, and it was not until 1828 that presidential electors were chosen in nearly all the states by popular vote. As late as 1876 the Colorado legislature chose the three presidential electors to represent that state. There is nothing in the constitution to prevent any state legislature naming its own electors without appeal to the people provided such a method of election is prescribed by the state laws.

From 1800 to 1824 presidential candidates were chosen by the members of congress in caucus. In 1824 the electoral college failed to make a choice from the candidates so submitted, and the matter went to the bonse of representatives. From years later Tennessee's legislature nominated Andrew Jackson without any reference to the congressional caucus. Ils opponent, John Quincy Admins, was nominated in lee old way, but that was the end of presidential noorinations by congressional caucus.

now don't you think you are?"

"No. I think other people are odd."

"Talking about odd people," interrupted Miss Matthews, "My Father had a friend, the Rev. Mr. Dostle, of Boston, who was once a candidate for the pastorate of King's Chapel; and he was the oddest man I ever saw! You know those Unitarians of King's Chapel have a good deal of ritual in their service, and Mr. Dostle told My Father that he would accept the pastorate only on condition that they changed their Prayer Book and left out "miscrable sinners"! I naked him how he could possibly want to leave out that, and he said that strangers coming into the church were offended by it and did not like it. Fancy, Dr. Forney!"

"Why did not some one suggest to to make any personal application?"

He gave a elight start as he fluished speaking and the color roshed to his face. Florence noticed it, and lazily moved her eyes in the direction of his glance - towards the bay-window. She saw nothing to account for his sudden color. Miss Rankin, on a low chair, just back from the window, was still dily looking out into the hight, her big business letter lying in her lap.

"The people of King's Chapel," said Miss Matthews, dogmatically, would love to think they were Episcopalians if they only could!"

"Yos," assented Forney, a little datagaby here? I will draw that blind."

He rose and crossed the room. Miss Rankin turned and looked at him as he came near. Her eyes were wide with a startled surprise and something of fear.
"Do you mind," he said hastlly,

"No," she said with a shive, "I

As he did so, his eye caught a few words written on the open pages
"For Edna, a full million."

He closed it and gave it to her.
She fushed and looked at him swiftly,
as she received it from his hands.
She preceded him across the room tinguish the outlines of two figures in the dim light—a mm and a womm. Dr. Forncy's voice she recognized at once.

"Why did you follow me here?" he was asking in a gravely remonstrating tone. "You must have known it could not do you any good."

The vibrating tone of the woman's reply struck a chill to the heart of the young girl who heard it. "I shall follow you to the ends of the earth, nutil you have mended the wrong you have done me."

"You know that I have done you no wrong. Your very love and suffering ought to tell you that."

"You think, I suppose, then, that I ought to be grateful to you. You think you have done me."

"You think, I suppose, then, that I ought to be grateful to you. You think you have done me a kindness."

"I know that I have."

"And I curse you for it!"

The ringing voice broke strangely upon the stillness and solitude of the night. Mira realized now that the woman was the same whom sho had seen a short time before, outside the parlow window. The long, dark hair had been bound up, and was not wildly streaming in the wind, as it had been hound a part of the parlow window. The long, dark hair in the wind a shoulders, which in Mira's first view of her, had been recklessly exposed. She was langaned and enceited—and yet she was fairs, ery fair. Mira wondered, with a thrill of excitement, if the man it her side were conscions of how fair she still was. There was something regal in her straight form, as standing in the marrow path, she threw back her head and telicreed upon him the harded of her heart.

"I curse you fer it, and I shall conse on while I breathe and think—until you have restored to me what you have levelured to me what you ha

"I do not trust you.—I believe nothing you tell me. II did se you neked me, you would probably have me locked up in the insane asylum."

"You are very fooliah. What object could I have in doing that?"

"Yes, what object could you have!

me, if I have to sell my soul to do it!"

"One thing I am determined upon," he quietly answered. "You must stop dogging my footsteps. I have had all I am going to stead of that. It must step," "Or you will appeal to the law again?" she said bitterly; "you will perhaps pat me to prison?"
"I have quite made up my mind that I will not be followed and annoyed by you amy longer. I hope you will not force me to take any measures in the matter,"
For a moment she did not answer. When she spoke again it was low an altered manner. Her voice was low and sorrowful and there was a penetrating sweetness in it.
"Have you no heart at all—no pity for me? Can you look on my infacty without my remorse for what you have done?"

ius.

And now for the first time, Mira Rankin began, after that night, to look upon Dr. Forney with eyes that saw, and to listen to him with cars that heard. Her absorption in her own affairs had been broken in upon.

own affairs had been broken in upon.

CHAPTER IV.

The views of "Sir Oracle" upon the subject of the "Enuncipation of Woman," had been flaunted into the faces of the boarders at Pellum Beach Cottage, while they sat at breakast, and the opinion held by "My Father" of the "Advanced Female," had been duly aired.

"And now," declared Miss Matthews, in her most unajor-general-like tone and mamner, picking up her knife and fork as if alouat to advance at once with fell intent upon the whole army of reforming women, "it is high time that we women, who hold the institutions of our ancestors in sacred reverance, and who honor our Homes, our Hearths, and St. Paul., should rise up and protest against these vulgar, unfomline cercatures who would force us against our wills to the ballot! The Emancipation of Wougen, My Father used to say, will drap her down from the pedestal upon the property of the property of the subject of the property of about the Emunicipation of Woman—tit always makes me think of Negroes, somehov."

No, dear, the emmeination of the slave was an entirely different marter! My Father was a strong Abolitionist. But give woman the Ballor and you make her! She will quarred with her hasband about his politics, if they are unlike hers, and the Home will be made unhappy. Sho will sell her vote. She will vote whimsically, hysterically, if will ruin the country!

"Well, Anut Doube, mone of un here believe in Woman's Suffrage, so what is the use of hothering? For my part," she added, impressively, as she slowly broke a hot roll, "I don't see why woman ban't satisfied as things are. Her power is greater than it would be if she voted. By affection, and persuasion and ingenuity," she can mould men to any extent?"

"Did you ever reform a man's political views, Miss Hale, by your affection, persuasion, and ingenuity?" Dr. Forney asked with a smile.

"Well," Florence acknowledged, laughing, "In ever tried. Men are so obstinate—you must know from your own case." she added with re fuscin ating pout, "show obstinate they are in holding their own opinions—especially political opinions."

"But you contradict yourself—you said.—"

"Oh!" she interrupted, "I can't be returned."

as for bolding a "discussion" on Wo-man's Suffrage with work a girl as Miss Hale.—he smiled internally at the incongruity of it. She was not the sort of young woman likely to be interested in the "rights" of her sox, having in her great beauty a power more far-reaching than any amount of political enancipation could give her. Then there was the little Puritan at the foot of the table—he would not like to shock the child with any earnest expression of his own "radical views," or she would be expecting him to drop adynamic bomb into her soup some day!

He was provoked with himself for feeling a sense of discomfort and oppression in the atmosphere of their narrowness. "How can I let it amoy may?" he thought impatiently.

Suddeuly he became conscious of the fact that a very sweet, low voice at the foot of the table was speaking. He pansed with his cup half way to his lips, to hear what she was saying, though he did not turn his head to look at her.

"We all know how violently women were opposed when they first wanted to teach school. And we know, too, what bitter opposition there was once to establishing women's colleges. And now it seems the same struggle must be gone through again to establish suffrage."

one of the strong-minded women, are we?"

"I am afraid I am not quite clear as to what you mean by "strong-minded."

If you mean self-assertive and aggressive I trust I am not that. But I hooe to see political freedom given to women some day—It surely will be given unites the world moves backwards."

"The world will move backwards if it is given to them!" angrily declared Miss Matthews. "Woman will be dragged down from the pedestal open which man has always placed her. My Father always said so. Chivalry will die out. Map and woman will become rivals instead of being helpmeets one to the other."

"It used to study his horrid old grammar," said Florence. "When we heard ho was here to-night, we wont into the library and found a copy of his book and looked through it to ase if we could discover what he is like. But he has not even a footnote about himself. How I used to hate that book! I think I can never forgive him for perpetrating it."

"We ought to invite him to take a sail og the bay with us," suggested Dade, "and drown him."

"No use," responded Florence; "the grammar would still go on, you know, and there would be one man the less!"

"You are a cool hand," Dade said, regarding her admiringly.

"Oome, Miss Rankin," interrupted Forney, "let us ferred out His Wiconess and take a look at him."

"I must object," said Dade. "I think Miss Rankin and I are engaged for this dance, and—I am sorry. Forney, to have to remind you of your engagements—but you and Miss Hale are down for it too. MARRIAGI, LICENSIS.

HRISCOE, ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSIS, Descrupto, Ontario.

Some men take risks with their lives that should be accounted criminal. A case is reported from Quebec, where a man whipped up his horse, half a mile from a railroad crossing to beat a train that was approaching. Although the train had a much greater distance to make, the waggon was struck and the driver killed, his brother, who was in the rig with him, being injured seriously.

Descrotto Market.

Oving to the continuous drought, there has been a continuou falling out of dairy products. Waggon after waggon could be visited, and on the request for price of butter, almost the invariable answer would be resulted and on the request for price of the continuous description of the farmers. If you want to know the prices on our market, read the following list:

"Yes; that's just what I should like to do, but one must consider things."

"You mean money?"

"Yes: I mean money. You see, if the multiplier is a marriage, if she said you drank or were already married—of course I know you are not but I am supposing a case"—

"Don't you think you might suppose something a little less uncomplimentary?"

"No; certainly not. What does it matter in supposing? Well, then it would be different, and I should feel that, however wrong she might be, she really meant well. But when she can only say that you are one of the most arrogant opponents of all the noblest and purest aspirations of our sex—which means that she suspects you of laughing at her bloomers—why, then, I know that it is not me that she is thinking of but herself edil the time. And she wants- me to marry Flebel-Jones because he flatters her to the top of her bent and calls her a pioneer and all that sort of nonestes."

"Do you think that punching his

At the close of the third day, during which she had beaten her previous record, Lady Judith stopped at a wayside hostelry. Hitherto Bob had, avoided the hotels which she favored with her patronage, but now there was no help for it. He must either put up in the same building or ride on five miles to the next town.

He thought that if he avoided the front of the house and effaced himself among the people in the bar parlor she would never notice him. After all, if she did she was scarcely likely to sup-

He loitered about for some little while in order to give her time to settle down in her place and then walked into the bar. The next minute he emerged again with sinular placetimes.

tograppy.

A brilliant idea sprang up in his brain. He engaged the annateur plu tographer in conversation and explain ed his desire. The koddle changed hands, and so did a gleaming yellow colu. There was some shuffling of new films. Then Bob Falls took hasty smap shots of the back and front of the building in order to divert suspicion from his real purpose. After that he conveyed the kodels to the law.

Some little time after her return from Scotland Lady Judith received a very singular letter. It ran:

Dear Lady Judith—I have a dozen of the inclosed. What should you recommend me to do with them? Yours truly, ROBERT FALK.

The inclosure was a photograph. She removed the silver paper hastily and saw. Well, you see, when the landlady of that hotel positively refused to admit her to any of the rooms used by ladies on the ground that her costume would do harm to the establishment she had consented to take her meal in the harroom and put up with an attierather than proceed farther in her estabusted state. She had regretted this weakness ever since. She only hoped that no knowledge of the insuit which she had disposed to be heaped upon the cause would come to the cars of her strong minded issters.

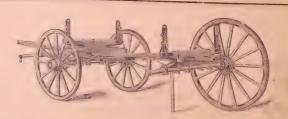

Now she saw before her eyes a visible presentment of the scene-herself in her seminantly garments scated at a small table to the right discussing provisions, to the left a knot of common men and the apparatus of the bar. It was bud enough to be exiled from her proper place. There was the worse thought that by her presence in the bar she had given not tenoung control to the curse of durch.

Bob Falk married Lydia Darrell with her aunt's consent, and no one could ever make out why Landy Judith changed her mind so suddenly, least of all Professor Fiebel-Jones, who thought himself aggreeved.

The Advantages of a Finnegan Tubular Axle Over a Solid Steel Axle.

In comparison to the Solid Steel Axle, the Tabular gives a much greater creumference and larger bearing, which on average reads, is well undestood to more the draught of the wagon very much lighter.

The Iron or Steel Axle, from its very slight taper, when set to bring the wheel to a plumb spoke, is not level on the bound of the point of the point, causing great friction and consequently heavy draft. The best Solid Axles sooner of later cryst dilize and break near the collar; whereas for well-known mostly and the point of the point

The Advantages o a Finnegan Tubular Axle Over a Skein.

In comparison to the Thinble Skein, to which we must concede the same advantage of large circumferance over the Soild Akle, as above stated, for the Tubular, we would call attention to the fact that the particular taper of the arm of the Tubular Akle is such that, when properly set, to bring the wheel to a pathe pack, it is level on the bottom side of the bearings, and having never to exceed one-fourth inch gather, allows the wheel to an attright and free on soft, muddy or smooth roads, with the least possible resistance, while the Thinble Skein, owing to its very treation as above stated. Thus both Solid Akles and Thimble Skeins loss the vast advantage of the Tubular, which has a level bearing in the wheel.

The Tabular Axle Spindles are finished as round and true as the finest Coach Axles, while all Skeins must from the process of their manufacture, vary in size and be imperfect in shape, causing more or less friction and heaviness of draft.

The Advantages of a Finnegan Tubular Axle Over a Wooden Axle, again adding to their draft.

The Tubular Axle being made of steel, hammered while very hot, under a spray of cold water, gives a bearing snooth and so hard that years of use show no appreciable were.

smooth and so hard that years of use show no appreciable wear.

They are provided with cast boxes of the best quality of gray iron, which gives them the advantage of the well known principle, that two metals of different texture, wearing upon each other, do so with much less friction than the order of the well.

Strength of Tubular Axles

To break a tube, power enough must be applied to crush or "buckle" it on one side, before it can open on the opposite side; therefore, unless there is a flaw in the metal (which is nearly impossible, as we test every piece). The

A Broken Tubular Axle (of proper thickness), such as manufactured by us, can hardly be found; they will in variably stand a heavier strain or shock before springing than will break either a Solid Steel or Hickney Axle of the same estimated capacity. It is well to know in this connection that in case of one being sprang it can be heated about the back to its original shape in just the same manner as a Solid Axle, and is no more liable to spring at the same place again than at any other point.

Purchasers are Inot Buying an Experiment.

We began the manufacture of Hellow Axles in 1888, and for twenty years used iron pipe. Since its invention in 1888, we have used Steel Tubing exclusively in all styles of Axles.

All will acknowledge that experience is better than theory; we declare that by scientific tests on level read mountain roads and deep mud roads, wagons with the Tubular, xlys, properly set, show an average of thirty per cerlighter draft than the best Solid Axle and Skein Wagons. This is also confirmed by hundreds of drivers and owne of wagons.

Do not confound our goods with the light "re-enforced" Hollow Axle made in imitation of the "Finnegan," and extensively advertised, but secure the old reliable thick steel Tubular Axle Wagons, made by

SHAKESPEAREAN PARTS.

The Melancholy Dane is the Longest of Them All.

The longest part in any Shakespearean play is Hamlet, who is before the audience almost constantly. Hamlet is a constant talker, and it is surprising that in the circumstances be says so many wise things. He has to his share 1,500 lines. Richard III is another longpart, as the character speaks 1,161 lines, and next comes lago, with 1,117 lines. Henry Y has 1,063 lines.

One would suppose from seeing the representation or from looking over the play that Othello had more lines than lago, but it is not the case, for the valiant Moor has only 889 lines. Corlolanus has 886, the Duke in "Measure For Measure" 880 and Timon 883. Antony in "Antony and Cleopatra" does not seem a very long part judging by the appearance of the prompt book, but in reality he has 530 lines.

Brutus in "Julius Cassar" has 727, Palstaff in "Henry V" 719. Macbeth appears a long part judging from how much be is on the stage in the representation, but in fact be has only 705 lines. Homeo has 618, which is only a few more than the King in "Hamlet," who has 551. Cassius in "Julius Cesar," although a first class part, has but 707 lines.

"But she knows your mother is ill, doesn't she? She was here when your mother fainted and she sent your little sister after me?"
"No, sir, that was the Other Lady."

"No, sir, that was the Other Lady." the Cher Lady, wheever she is, did a selfish thing in deserting these children before I could get here." Yet he thought there was perceptible softening of the elder children before I could get here. "Face as she mentioned this 'Other Lady,' evidently she was quite a domestic institution here. "She sayed she'd hurry to the village," said the little girl, 'and send some urandy quick from a drug store. She sayed you'd make mother all right, 'cause you was a good Boston dector."

right, 'cause you was a good Boston dioctor.'

Even se she spoke, a boy appeared at the open door bearing the promised brandy. He was breathless and red from his haste. "She's a goin' to pay me half a dollar if I can bring it back in writin' from Dr. Forney that I go here at least four thirty'—that's ten minutes since I started.'"

Dr. Forney, promptly wrote the testimonial and delivered it in exchange for the brandy; and the boy departed.
"Who is the lady?" he asked.
"The one that sent this brandy."
"But what is her name?"
"The one chart sent the brandy."
"She's the Other Lady."
"She's the Other Lady."
"She woman shook her besed feebly and raised her hand.

"I do not want any money. only want to save your life-for your children. You cannot live if the tumor is not removed soon."

"I know that. The New York doctors mid the same thing."

"Then you have been to New York to see a doctor?"

"He came here to see me. The Other Lady sent for him. Oh!" she added confusedly, "dou't tell no one that she sent for him."

"Will you tell me who the doctorwas."

"Dr. Traine."
"Traine! He came from New York to see you!" he said in surprise. for the man!" reputation was high and the price set upon every minute of his time was large. He decided that the 'Other Lady' must be a very generous woman.
"And what did Dr. Traine advise—you to do!"

you to do?"
"I'm to go to a New York hospital as soon as the Other Lady can find some one to stay with my children.
Doctor Traine, he'll take charge of me when I get there. The 'Other to get some one to stay with my candren. Oh!" she added fervently. "she's an angel! If many peoule was like her, we'd have heaven on earth!" Forney was silent for a moment; presently he said:

"Does the 'Other Lady' live in the villam."

presently he saud:
"Does the 'Other Lady' live in the village."
"No, sir, she's a summer boarder at Pelham Bench Cottage."
He felt the thood rush to his face. Miss Hafe!" he thought, with a sudden leap of his heart. "And I had begun to think her a bit mercenary and selfahi! So this is the way she employs some of her superfinous wealth!"
He could not doubt for a moment that it was Miss Hale, as she and her annt were the only "lady boarders" in the cottage, besides Miss Rankin, who was, of course, poor.
The discovery was quickly followed by another which tid not please him so well.

by another which did not please him so well.

'Then the lady from Pelham Beach Cottage who is so inconsiderate about her laundry, and delays paying for it when it is not finished on time, must be Miss Rankin, I would not have believed that of her.'

"How did the ladies at Pelham Beach Cottage," he asked, "hear of you in your retreat herei."

"The laudlady at the Cottage sends for me when the ladies want washing did, and I go and get if. But the Other Lady found as one day here, when she was takin' a walk'.

"Why do you call her the 'Other Lady'."

"Why do you call her the 'Other Landy?"

"It's the children begun it. They seen both the young ladies at the Cortage when they went with me, one night, to fetch the wash. And the Other Lady talked to 'en, and sayed she once had two little sisters' just as big as them, and she put her hands on their cheeks, and afterwards them children conduln't talk of nothin' else or a week."

And now a new blog syddonly flash.

children couldn't talk of nothin' else or a week.'
And now a new idea suddenly flashed upon the woman's mind.
"I'll tell the Other Lady that you'll do it. Then I wouldn't have to go to New York. And you wouldn't benge so much. mebbe, as Dr. Traine. His prices is that high, you wouldn't believe it! He churged her one hundred and fifty dollars to come here and see me!" she said with a half gasp, "and he sayed that was cheaper'n he done it for most. And she paid it that cheerful! And when he sayed the could care me and save me to my dear children, the Other Lady just looke down and cried! She's that feelin' a heart! I never knowed such a lady before! Now this afternoon, when I was burryin' so's to get that wash did, she sayed, 'If the lady don't pay you prompt for it, I'll pay yod—or I'll help you iron it,' she sayed, langhin'."
Forney was deeply impressed. Such seemed to be an educated feminine hand.

"It must be Miss Hale who wanders alone in there deserted regions in search of proteges and drops things by the way."

But he saw at once that it was not Miss Hale's writing; he knew her hand very well. The nemnanship, however, struck him as being familiar, though he could not remember where he had ever seen it before. The sheet was covered with veress—rather marked and erased. Evidently they had just been composed, for the ink in blotted places was not yet quite dry. Curioisty led him to read.

"Bohemia," the verses were headed.

"The world of cafe and attic.

"Hello!" Forney said to himself.
"Now who on earth wrote this? Who, about here, could have written it?
And where have I reen this writing?
I am sure I bave seen it romewhere."
He thought he liked the little lines
—there was a swing and a dash to them.

"As for Bohemia," he smiled, "I must pity the soul that never longs for that 'land of the free." I could shake hands with the author of these rlynnes. I near to find out her or him. Ah!"

He had a sudden recollection.

"For Edna, a full million."

He had once seen the words in a blank book belonging to Miss Rankin.
The same hand had written them which had penned these verses. He was sure of it. He remembered that writing perfectly. It was peculiar—as was this on the paper which he carried.

He Dudged.

There is a young must in Brooklyn who needs a tout of some kind, else he would not have failed to enture as a stractive on somewhat is ever comes to one. He accouptanted a charulag young woman to a church wedding on the park slope and arrived at about the time the bride and groom were due. The young woman with him was dressed somewhat as the bride was expected to be clad, and as alse walked up the main alsie of the church with her scort the organist began to play the wedding march. The couple, however, instead of foiling on to the altar, stopped in one of the pews not far from the front. One of the ushers came forward and told them that the elergyman was waiting for them, and their friends near, perceiving the situation, urged them to respond to the summons. The young woman said she was ready and willing, but the young man, to his everlasting disgrace, refused to move, and if he lives to his dying day the people who know the girl say that Hugh will not have another such chance for happiness.—Brooklyn Eagle.

One of the best known residents of Kingston, Ont., is Charles H. Clarke, who for nine years in succession held the civic street-watering contract. While following his daily vocation he contracted rheumatism in his legs and feet, through getting them wet so often. For three weeks he was so bad he could not put on his boots. He had almost lost the use of his legs, and was unable to obtain any relief from the terrible pains until he gave Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure a trial. It worked like magic; and before he had taken the contents of three bottles he was as well as he ever was at any period of his life. He took the contents of only three bottles, and is completely cured, with no sign of a return of the old complaint. "I shall have to make a lawyce and of that hoy of mine. I don't see any other way out of It," declared the well known attorney, with a laugh. "He came luto my office the other day on his way home from school ond laid nicked down on the desk before me. "What is this for, son? I asked. "Retainer,' he answered soberly. "Very well,' said I, entering into the joke. "What have I been retained upon?"

"My boy dug down into his pocket and produced a note from his teacher and placed it before me without comment. It was to the effect that he had been 'eutifu gu' and advised a whilpping.

"Now, what would you advise? asked he in a businesslike voice after had read the note and saw the tray that young rascal led me lato. "I think that out fart move should be to apply for a change of venue; said I.

"Yery well,' and will be not distanced the world in the standard of Queen's Utility and the very many and said."

"Then we will turn the note over to your mother,' said I at "I saw the young lap,' face fall at this, but he braced up and said."

"Yet we he braced up and said."

"Yet we he had been 'evalue' to your mother,' said I at this, but he braced up and said."

"Yet has been been populated by the court.' I answered, 'hut you will have to accept the decision. I would not dare to attempt to indunce the court."

"Well, I pleaded the boy's case, promptly had it thrown out of court, and the boy got what he deserved—good whipping.

A popular author whose handwriting was none of the best used to maintain that it was a matter of principle with birn but to write too well. He declared that for the use of printers, good handwriting was only a snare and a delusion, tending to encourage cardessness and mistakes ou their part. The compositors, he asserted, were compelled to devote their very best care and attention to bad handwriting, with the result that, when it was deciphered, it was so fixed in their minds that it was impossible for them to set it up incorrectly. He therefore declared that the worst bandwriting was the best for the printers.—Truth.

The Advantages of a Finnegan Tubular Axle Over a Solid Steel Axle.

The Advantages o a Finnegan Tubular Axle Over a Skein.

Strength of Tubular Axles.

To break a tube, power enough must be applied to crush or "bnckle" it on one side, before it can open on the opposite side; therefore, unless there is a flaw in the metal (which is nearly impossible, as we test every piece). The Tubular Axie is many times stronger than any other make of Axie, or any part of the wagon.

A Broken Tubular Axie (of proper thickness), such as manufactured by us, can hardly be found; they will invariably stand a heavier strain or shock before springing than will break either a Solid Steel or Hickory Axie of the same estimated capacity. It is well to know in this connection that in case of one being apring it can be heated and bent back to its original shape in just the same manner as a Solid Axie, and is no more liable to spring at the same place again than at any other point.

Purchasers are not Buying an Experiment.

We began the manufacture of Hollow Axles in 1868, and for twenty years used iron pipe. Since its invention in 1888, we have used Steel Tubing exclusively in all styles of Axles.
